Dear Workability In Michigan Team:

Michigan is hard at work making sure that there is "No Worker Left Behind." This certainly includes those injured on the job. Even in today's troubled economy, progressive and innovative companies realize that using best practices such as injury prevention, integration of disability benefits systems, on-site vocational services, transitional work options, and partnerships with Employee Assistance Programs, among others, greatly enhances the chances that employees are able to stay at work, or return to work after injury or illness.

The Workers' Compensation Agency supports the necessary dialogue between various stakeholders to determine the most comprehensive and collaborative approach to the Stay-At-Work/Return-To-Work process.

Very truly yours,
